

How to Write Your Tooth Fairy Letter

A parent guide from Wiggly Tooth Workshop

Part 1 — Choose Your Child's Quality

Think about a real moment when you noticed this quality beginning to grow. The Tooth Fairy notices small moments adults sometimes overlook.

Courage Doing something new, speaking up, sleeping alone, joining a group, going to the dentist	Kindness Helping a sibling, including someone, comforting a friend, sharing without being asked	Patience Practicing something hard, waiting calmly, sticking with a challenge, learning a new skill
Creativity Drawing, building, inventing stories, making music, solving problems in a new way	Curiosity Asking thoughtful questions, exploring how things work, noticing details adults miss	Persistence Continuing after frustration, trying again after mistakes, finishing something hard
Wonder Observing nature, stars, animals, clouds, or seeing magic in everyday things	Friendship Making someone feel included, listening carefully, forgiving someone, being loyal	Confidence Trying something independently, performing, raising a hand, sharing an idea
Responsibility Helping at home, cleaning up, helping a younger child, taking turns, trying to help	Imagination Pretending, storytelling, building worlds, asking "what if?" questions	Honesty Telling the truth, owning a mistake, being trusted with something important

Part 2 — What Did the Tooth Fairy Do With the Magic?

The Tooth Fairy works in quiet ways. She does not need to make giant miracles happen. Choose something connected to your child's world.

Animals your child loves: If your child loves owls : help a baby owl safely find its nest. If your child loves dogs : help a lost puppy hear its owner calling. If your child loves turtles : help a tiny turtle reach the water. If your child loves butterflies : help one find flowers after a storm. If your child loves rabbits : help one find a safe hiding place. If your child loves dolphins : help guide them through dark water.	Places your child knows: A playground light flickering back on A garden getting just enough rain A squirrel finding its way across the yard A bird finding a safe branch in the wind A neighbour's flower blooming at the right time A lost mitten noticed before it disappeared

Match the quality to the magic:

Courage	Tonight, I used a little bit of that courage to help a nervous fox kit step out of its den and find its family.
Kindness	Tonight, I used a little bit of that kindness to help a lonely child feel brave enough to ask someone to play.
Patience	Tonight, I used a little bit of that patience to calm the wind just long enough for a small bird to land safely.
Creativity	Tonight, I used a little bit of that creativity to help someone solve a problem they had almost given up on.
Wonder	Tonight, I used a little bit of that wonder to make the stars shine a little brighter for someone who needed to look up.
